

Passenger announcements in the airport

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20040128-00

January 28, 2004

Raymond Chen

While in Seattle-Tacoma International Airport yesterday, waiting for my flight to eventually be cancelled due to weather, then waiting for a replacement itinerary (um, the weather is the same at the destination; doesn't matter which plane you take), then waiting for the replacement to be cancelled also (wow imagine that), I heard an announcement on the public address system: "Will passenger Michael Kinsley please pick up a white courtesy phone." Probably the closest I will get to Michael Kinsley.

Last year, while waiting in I think it was LAX or possibly DEN, I heard the announcement "Will passenger Larry Ellison please pick up a white courtesy phone."

Raymond Chen

Follow

