

Microspeak: Housing

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20080130-00

January 30, 2008

Raymond Chen

The real estate department at Microsoft has their own weird jargon. In the real estate world, you don't "work" in a building; you are "housed" there. Here are a few citations.

| The new buildings will be able to house N workers.

| Employees housed at Facility X will be able to use temporary parking spaces being constructed at Location Y.

Raymond Chen

Follow

