

It's not just on the Internet that nobody knows you don't have a real office

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20090814-01

August 14, 2009

Raymond Chen

Sure, your company don't have an office, but that's okay. You can rent a fake one, with a fake receptionist, fake staff, and fake conference rooms, and whenever somebody stops by asking for you, the receptionist is trained to say that you're "out".

Raymond Chen

Follow

