

City noises and their effects on songbirds

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20090824-01

August 24, 2009

Raymond Chen

Robins in Sheffield sing at night because it's too noisy in the daytime. That reminds me that when I was in Antigua, Guatemala, I was told that the songbirds in the city have started mimicking car alarms. Apparently this is also happening in Oregon with birds mimicking car alarms and cell phone ring tones.

Raymond Chen

Follow

