

Stuff my father-in-law says: On baking bread

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20170616-01

June 16, 2017

Raymond Chen

No, this is not my attempt to get picked up as a television show. It's just that my father-in-law sometimes says funny stuff.

When my mother came to visit, she brought some bread that she had made in a bread-making machine. The conversation went something like this:

Father-in-law: "Wow, this bread is really good. Maybe we should get a bread-making machine."

Mom: "It's really easy to do. You just measure the ingredients, put them in the machine, and push the button. Three hours later, you have fresh bread!"

Father-in-law: "Three hours? After three hours I might not still be hungry!"

Raymond Chen

Follow

